50. Crazy Ex-Girlfriend (1 of 2 seasons)

A musical series about a woman who leaves her prestigious job in Manhattan to follow an ex-boyfriend to a small town in California, Crazy Ex-Girlfriend is like no other show on a show on television. The premise is not unlike that of Felicity, but the tone is unique: Quirky and hilarious on the surface, but dark and subversive underneath. As co-creator (along with Aline Brosh McKenna) and star, Golden Globe winner Rachel Bloom provides catchy songs with irreverent lyrics that offer dark meditations on depression, insecurity, and the challenges of balancing careers and love lives. Crazy Ex-Girlfriend is a funny, feminist and infectious, and the best new show on network television in 2015.

49. Sense8 (1 of 1 season)

Once the Wachowskis' underappreciated sci-fi series establishes its characters, there's at least one profoundly moving moment in every episode. Sense8 is rich with brilliant ideas, and, though they're not always executed with perfect logic, the chemistry between the characters is undeniable. It's impossible not to root for them, to feel and experience their ups and downs, their confusion and heartbreak, and, most of all, their love. The Wachowskis first foray into television is at once romantic, life-affirming, and thought-provoking.
